

ENERGY AUDIT

South Dakota residential natural gas customers

Montana-Dakota Utilities' residential natural gas customers in South Dakota are eligible to have an energy audit performed on their home for a cost of $50.

If you are noticing moisture problems, drafts or other problems with your home, an energy audit may help you determine how to solve those problems.

A home energy audit helps you determine where your house is losing energy – and how such problems can be corrected to make your home more energy efficient.

Montana-Dakota has a limited number of residential energy audits available to its natural gas customers.

Here is how the program works:

Fill out the application and send it to Montana-Dakota. If you are approved for an energy audit, Montana-Dakota will notify you and a third-party contractor will contact you to schedule the audit.

Once the audit is completed, Montana-Dakota will bill you $50 for the audit. Typically a home energy audit can cost you up to $500.

A home energy audit gives you a thorough picture of where your home is losing energy and how you can save money.

If you are interested in a home energy audit, simply fill out the application form on the back of this insert and mail it to:
